

JAPAN VIRTUALLY
REJECTS AMERICAN
BOMBING PROTEST

Formal Reply is Made to Secretary of State Cordell Hull

ATTACK 'UNAVOIDABLE'

Reply Considered "Highly Unsatisfactory" In Washington

Japan today, in a formal reply to the American Secretary of State Hull, virtually rejected the United States protest against bombing of Nanking. Developments:

1. Japan terms the aerial attacks on Nanking "unavoidable."
2. Japanese artillery pound Chinese positions on Shanghai front.
3. Tokyo claims Japanese captured Tungkwang in North China and killed 2,000 Chinese on Shansi front.
4. Mussolini leaves Italian soil after visiting Hitler in Germany.
5. Britain seeks to end Far Eastern and Spanish conflict.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30—Japan's curtly worded reply to the American protest over air raids on China's civilian centers and non-combatant areas was considered "highly unsatisfactory" in administration quarters here today.

Officially, Secretary of State Hull and his advisors withheld comment for the moment but there were private expressions of dissatisfaction over the Japanese attitude.

The third note of protest of even stronger tone was predicted if the air raids continued after Japan's reply indicated they will.

Wires.Lindbergh Not To Renounce
Citizenship

New York, Sept. 30—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh will not renounce his American citizenship to become a British subject, and any stories to that effect are "pipe dreams," Dr. Alexis Carrell, famous scientist, declared today.

Arriving on the Normandie, Dr. Carrell, scientific team-mate of the American flier, was in close contact with Lindbergh throughout the Summer, and said: "Lindbergh has absolutely no idea of becoming a British subject."

Asked whether he and Lindbergh have had any success with the "mechanical heart," product of the combined ingenuity of the scientist and the flier, Dr. Carrell answered: "We never say we are successful in science. We just say that we are still working."

EXPLAINS WHY BLACK
SHOULD BE DISQUALIFIED

Klan Affiliation; Also Violation of Search-and-Seize Clause

BY S. A. R. PRESIDENT

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 30—(INS)—Two reasons why Associate Justice Hugo L. Black should be disqualified from membership on the Supreme Court were advanced today by Kessmore Kendall, president general of the Sons of the American Revolution.

Kendall declared Black should be barred not only because of his alleged Ku Klux Klan affiliation but also because he violated the search-and-seize clause of the Constitution when, as chairman of the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee, he seized thousands of private telegrams.

"Broadway Melody of '38"
Comes To Grand Theatre

"Broadway Melody of 1938," as its title indicates, is a year ahead of its time.

The scintillating musical from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is showing at the Grand Theatre Thursday and Friday, co-starring Robert Taylor and Eleanor Powell, with a cast that is virtually an all-star aggregation.

It includes George Murphy, Binnie Barnes, Buddy Ebsen, Sophie Tucker, Judy Garland, Charles Igor Gorin, Raymond Walburn, Robert Benchley, Willie Howard, Charles Grapewin, Robert Willack and a chorus of lovely girls. The audience will leave the theatre in rare good mood, whistling and humming such numbers from the score as "I'm Feeling Like a Million," "Sun Showers," "Yours and Mine," "Pair of New Shoes," "Follow in My Footsteps," "Your Broadway and My Broadway" and Sophie Tucker's remembered "Some Of These Days." Eleanor Powell outdoes her finest performance as a tap dancer extraordinary. Robert Taylor proves again his versatility as an actor and he also sings very well. Without exception the players are uniformly excellent.

As Justice Black Returned

The eagerly-awaited Mr. Justice Hugo L. Black is surrounded by the press (there were 100 present) on his arrival in Norfolk, Va., from Europe. Justice Black, cordially itself, refused to discuss the Ku Klux Klan charges with which he has been bombarded for weeks. Any statement will "be made in a way the public can understand," was his only comment.

FARMERS HANDICAPPED
BY THE LACK OF RAIN

Postpone Planting of Wheat Because of Lack of Moisture

SMUT CAUSES DAMAGE

Many farmers in Bucks County, it is stated, are holding off the sowing of their grain because of the lack of moisture, the seed cannot germinate. Farmers throughout Bucks county, according to County Agent William F. Greenawalt, Doylestown, are beginning to feel the result of the dry weather, and in numerous places wells are becoming exhausted of their water supply.

Owing to the absence of severe storms during the past Summer the fodder is in excellent condition. Very few stalks were blown to the ground and little fodder was shredded as the result of hail storms during the Summer. The fodder is unusually heavy and the prospects of a heavy yield are good.

The growing season for corn was good, especially until the latter part of July, when there was a short period of dry weather. Rains the latter part of August, however, were of much assistance to the crop.

Mr. Greenawalt has pointed out that as the farmers are treating their seed wheat for the Hessian fly they will get into danger by running into stink smut which is dreaded almost as much among the farmers as the Hessian fly. Mr. Greenawalt said that all seed wheat should be treated thoroughly for stink smut with either copper carbonate dust or an improved mercury dust. At present there are only two large seed wheat treating machines in the county, although a small one, which will treat only a bushel at a time, is available. Mr. Greenawalt has announced that he will be glad to give farmers information as to where they can have their wheat treated for stink smut.

The anguinos grain moth, according to Mr. Greenawalt, is also beginning to put in its appearance in bins where the grain is stored. Farmers have been told that if these moths are seen around the bins, they should treat the wheat with carbon bisulphide. Further information regarding the treatment of wheat for this moth can be received in the office of Mr. Greenawalt.

The apple harvest is in full swing in all parts of the county. Prospects for a heavy yield are good, but the large amount of disease and insect injury will make severe grading necessary. This will cut down to some extent on the marketable crop, but owing to the unusually heavy yield, it is not believed that there will be a shortage of apples this Fall.

Police and Constables' Ass'n Suggests Use of the Blood Test Method

PLAN FOR MEETING

An interesting and instructive meeting of the Bucks County Police and Constables Association is planned for the evening of October 7th in the Bucks County Court House, Doylestown.

The meeting is to be addressed by Arthur M. Eastburn, district attorney of Bucks county; and representatives of the office of the attorney general and State Liquor Control Board.

The association is endeavoring to have a change made in the method of determining whether or not an operator of an automobile is under the influence of intoxicating liquor. This is determined now merely by a physical examination which is often in dispute. It is proposed to have a blood test made by the examining physician. Blood tests have been proven, it is said, by the Mellon Institute, to be exceedingly accurate.

Dr. Tice and the committee having in hand the organization of the crime laboratory have approved the following as members:

Dr. Roscoe Magill, New Hope; Dr. John J. Sweeney, Doylestown; Dr. J. Fred Wagner, Bristol; John Rosenberger, Doylestown; Victor A. Sharrett, Doylestown.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Copyright, 1937, by The Baltimore Sun)

They Ignore the Facts

SPREADING SWEETNESS and light on his political tour of the West, the President tells the people not to worry, assures us that the United States is not going broke, that everything will be simply swell if the pursuit of his "major objectives" is not thwarted. For the twentieth odd time the Secretary of the Treasury speaks hopefully of economy and of a balanced budget—if not next year, then some year. In brief, listening to these dulcet New Deal voices the conclusion is easy to reach that the future is bright, indeed, that

MRS. WINFIELD S. ELLIS
DIES AT NEWTOWN HOME

Was in 94th Year; Had Sewed for Soldiers in Civil and World Wars

TWO SONS SURVIVE

NEWTOWN, Sept. 30—Mrs. Franciscana Girton Ellis, widow of Winfield S. Ellis, died yesterday afternoon at her home on Court street, this borough.

The deceased, who had been in ill health for several months, would have reached her 94th birthday anniversary on October 5th. Mrs. Ellis was the daughter of the late James and Mary Martindell Girton, of Newtown, where she spent all of her long life, with the exception of about four years on a farm near Buckingham when first married. Her husband, son of the late George Brown and Amy Atkinson Ellis, died two years ago in his 94th year. He was a veteran of the Civil War.

The deceased was a member of St. Luke's Episcopal Church, teaching in the Sunday School for many years. She was an active member of the Newtown Woman's Christian Temperance Union as long as her health permitted.

During the Civil War the late Mrs. Ellis assisted in making of clothing for the soldiers, and it fell to her lot to aid in similar work during the World War.

A woman of kindly disposition and high moral purpose, and a loving mother and sister, she will be sadly missed by all who knew her. She is survived by two sons, Dr. Charles G. Ellis, Margaretville, N. Y.; and William J. Ellis, of this borough, publisher of the Delaware Valley Advance. Two other children, Amy Rebecca and B. Franklin Ellis, died in youth. One sister, Miss Rebecca J. Girton, Newtown, also survives.

Funeral will be held in St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Saturday at two p. m. Friends may call at the funeral parlors of Stacy Brown Friday evening from seven to nine o'clock. Interment will be in Wrightstown Friends burying grounds.

Judge Calvin S. Boyer
Accepts Chairmanship

"I have accepted the general chairmanship of the annual scouting campaign. Being a member of the executive board, I am familiar with the effective work being done and the urgent need for funds."

"The growth of our present membership of 1428 boys and young men has been a great achievement. Only by the most careful budgeting of both time and money has this been possible."

"Scouting is reaching our youth. It has a fascinating program of out-door and in-door things for them to do. No one realizes more than the Judges of the Courts that the great needs of modern youth are character building and worthwhile interests and occupations during leisure hours. We know of no organization better fitted for, and doing more to accomplish these deeds than Scouting."

"Our immediate need is to provide the necessary funds to continue the Scouting work. For this, I am giving my support as Chairman and request the loyal cooperation of all Bucks Counties to give likewise of their time and financial assistance. Your support and generous contributions are surely needed at this time."

TALES OUT OF EAST

China and Russia are negotiating a secret political and military treaty—so Tokyo newspaper readers are told in a dispatch from Shanghai—whereby China is to get a "gigantic supply of war munitions" and the services of Russian technical advisers and volunteer soldiers. The dispatch was sent out by the Japanese Domei news agency; and, obviously, it was not sent without the knowledge and consent of Japanese military authorities in Shanghai.

It is a quite circumstantial dispatch. The vast supply of war material is said to include 300 airplanes; and one wonders whether the mysterious plane out of the North reported by a well-known American radio commentator could be a demonstration machine taken out for a spin in the war zone by an enterprising Soviet salesman. The Domei dispatch does not offer enlightenment on that point; but it does give this list of additional Russian war supplies which the reputed new treaty would give to China:

One hundred anti-aircraft guns, 200 field guns, 20,000 artillery shells, 150,000 rifles, 60,000,000 rounds of small arms ammunition, 100 tanks, 1,500 armored cars, 5,000 horses, 2,000 cars and 2,500 motorcycles.

That looks like a rather formidable order of munitions. And why were the Japanese military censors so prompt in letting Domei tell the Japanese all about it?

More than one guess is possible. The first is that the Japanese government is building up in advance a case for extended aggression in Northern China. Another is that Japan's dominant military caste is acutely aware of the Japanese people's apathy toward the military adventure in China. After all, nothing could stir Japanese war spirit more effectively than popular belief that Japan's old enemy, Russia, is preparing to renew the inconclusive war of more than 30 years ago.

STEAK, RARE

Steak may become a delicacy of the rich if the present upward trend in steer prices continues. Of course, theoretically, there should be plenty of steak for the ill-nourished under any logical scheme for the fuller life, but planned economy generally winds up with the ill-nourished, their ranks greatly swelled, existing on a diet of beautiful phrases.

Choice steers on the Chicago market touched $20.50 a hundred-weight the other day, the highest price in 18 years. This is bad news for the cornucopia boys because it has the average voter where he can feel it. It would be good news for farmers and stockmen, except for the fact that they have few beef animals to sell.

The drought of a few years ago was probably to blame mainly for the unsatisfactory beef situation, and this also is bad. If this doesn't suggest to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace a plan for an ever-normal rainfall, financed by Government deficits, the Secretary is slipping.

In Wisconsin, a survey indicates that more men are turning to the teaching profession. Apparently, many an educated man feels that the scholastic world owes him a bare living.

Study hard, Junior, and some day you'll be in the privileged class which is pulled down by the boy who plays hooky.

DOG GRAFTER

BOSTON—(INS)—Even a dog has his price for a bribe. In this case the bribe was a can of dog food which permitted two boys to keep a watchdog silent while they raided a garage in which were stored cases of candy and cigarettes. "It was easy," they told police, "after being scared away the first night we returned with the dog food."

"THE SILVER ROOD MYSTERY"

by Lewis Allen Browne

CHAPTER XXXII

I had no more than turned into Cove road before Mrs. Stapleton asked, "What do you really think?"

"Too much proof."

"I hadn't thought of that."

"I want to check up on the fire that burned some records. I want to check up on other things."

"Such as?"

"Well, Mrs. Stapleton, as I said, let's not build too high hopes."

"It isn't because we cannot afford to give her what she asks. I honestly want her to have it if she is the daughter of Gerard. But I don't want to think that of Gerard."

"Oh come now, he was young, she was pretty. Sir Galahads are as scarce as the Dodo. It isn't impossible that this little Nola Lutzmann should have wanted to do as she did—never let him know."

"I never heard of such idiotic sentimentality."

"Well, we shall see what we shall see."

I left her at the house and drove down home in time for the two o'clock luncheon. Sally came rushing out from the south veranda where the luncheon was being served.

"Wally wants you at once, at his office, Harley, but do have coffee and a salad first," she said.

"Did he say why, Old Girl?"

"Not a word. What happened?" she asked, in a whisper.

"Long story—in she had some startling papers. Tell you later."

I rushed through the luncheon and drove to Greatport.

"I'll finish later," he said to the stenographer, and waited until she left and closed the door. Then he picked up a cablegram from under a book on his desk and handed it to me. It was addressed to him, and read:

"Lardeau coming back with us, willingly. Colton."

"How's that, Harley?" Foxcroft cried.

"It's a dastardly trick!" I exclaimed. "He should be brought back in irons. He'll escape, you can bet that!"

"Nonsense, Harley," Foxcroft cried. "Can't you see that this proves what I contended all the time—Lardeau merely stole that painting on the same afternoon that Griswold killed Monteth."

"Lardeau realized," I argued, rather heatedly, "that if he refused to come back willingly, he would soon be locked up until he could be extradited. By agreeing to come back of his own volition, he secures plenty of freedom and the opportunity to escape. Can't you get it in touch with your cousin, Mr. Colton, and warn him?"

"No need of it. Lardeau is innocent or he wouldn't agree to come back here."

"Even if he were innocent, he wouldn't run the risk of facing a murder charge in an alien country."

I read the cablegram again.

"When did you get it?"

"About ten o'clock—couldn't raise you. Harper's gone to Kingsbury to try and get something new on Griswold."

"Griswold? What's new there?"

"Going to search his effects when he drives over to see Mary."

I laughed at him.

"That was done before."

"I know, but there might have been something that he hid, and after the search, put back with his papers—some letter from Monteth, threatening him, perhaps."

"Look here, Wally, I know that Griswold isn't quite clear, but this Lardeau tried to buy the painting and Monteth refused. The third time he came back, perhaps prepared to offer more money, Monteth was asleep, we have every reason to believe. He woke up and caught Lardeau taking the picture. Lardeau knew all about trick knives disguised as silver rods, doubtless."

"Oh, come, I'll bet there isn't another in the world. That is hand-made."

"For that matter, Mary isn't absolutely cleared—"

"That's crazy talk!"

"Nor is Davison."

"He had been there twelve years, we've looked him up, he was eight years with the Warrentons in Wilmington before that, as fine a character as any man—master or man—ever had."

"That doesn't eliminate him. Of course Nola Morin."

I jumped up excitedly.

"Doubtless. You seem to do your best detective work in your stories, Old Man," observed Wally.

I told him of the forenoon session and of Morin's proofs.

"I know, she said she had plenty. The girl was right, she wouldn't be likely to kill her own father."

"Nola Morin isn't eliminated by a mighty long shot, Wally," I said gravely, "suppose she concocted this swindle, or suppose Wilbur Fellows, who may or may not be her husband, concocted it for her. Then, if it is all faked proof, Monteth would laugh at it and prove that it was a swindle, but with Monteth dead, there would be no one to disprove their claims."

"That's got a hole in it as big as the moon. If she killed him how would she dare, later, to make a claim to his property? She knew that she was under suspicion."

I shook my head, wearily. Foxcroft, I feared, was right. I did my best detective work in my stories.

"When may we expect Lardeau, if he doesn't escape?"

"Five or six days, depending on which boat they take."

"If he escapes, it will shake your belief that Griswold is guilty."

"I doubt it. It will only show that he doesn't want to face a charge of stealing a painting."

"I only hope we get our hands on Lardeau. Have you anything else to suggest?"

"Not a thing. This claim of Morin's will be entirely out of my jurisdiction unless you can prove that it is a swindle. I can't help you in that angle at present."

"Right."

I went out and over to Harper's office to use the telephone there. I didn't want to risk having Foxcroft's secretary, or others in his office, hearing me. I got in touch with Phil in about an hour, made an appointment to meet him in New York and went home.

At noon, the next day, I met Phil and told him all that I knew. I had picked up from Judge Wentworth the original letter from Nola Lutzmann to her sister Grilda, telling of the birth of a daughter on February 10, 1912.

"Now, Phil, Morin will be marking time until she hears from Judge Wentworth. You will know where to locate her. Your next job is to go over to Carlstadt and find out if there was any town or city hall fire, or any fire that destroyed vital statistic records, about twenty years ago."

"Fine. That's better than watching a little old brick two-family house."

And so he went his way while I went to police headquarters and got some valuable information concerning experts in the matter of both inks and papers.

Mr. Schwarz, who was a chemist of repute, was a smallish man with sleepy appearing eyes. I gave him the letter.

"Ummm, a matter of identification, or of an estate, yes?"

"Both, Professor."

"I dropped the 'Professor' long ago. I haven't taught for years and I find that it is better to go as plain Mister. He tossed the letter on his littered desk."

"Go easy with it, please, it's important. When can you let me know about it?"

"Tomorrow."

"I want to know about the paper, when it was made, it's age, anything—everything."

"Not everything," he smiled. "I perform no miracles. I could not tell you who bought it, who sold it, and who the retail buyer was. I may tell you who made it, and when."

"That will be fine. And the ink?"

He picked up the letter again, put it under a compound microscope and studied it. He shook his head.

"I shall have to work on that. Tomorrow noon, I will let you know. I shall have to remove a little of the ink."

"That won't—" I remembered the photostat. "Very well, we have a photostat."

It was rather late when I got back to Greatport, but Sergeant Harper was in the office.

"What about Griswold?" I asked. He laughed. "That was Mr. Foxcroft's idea," he explained. "I made the search. Not a thing out of the way, not a grain of anything that could incriminate him."

"What did Foxcroft say?"

"That Griswold was clever."

"I've asked you many times, I'll ask again, what do you think?"

"I think that if Griswold did it, no jury in the world would hold him on the mere fact that he was seen coming out of the house, especially with that maid's testimony that she saw him step in and right out again—the maid who was at the bird case and saw Morin."

"I agree, but if he is put on trial it will be mighty tough on him—he will lose that university appointment. What is more, unless I am mistaken in him, he will never marry Mary until he is thoroughly cleared."

MUHLBERG COLLEGE TO INAUGURATE PRES'T

Place of Small Liberal Arts College To Be Emphasized At Programs

ON OCTOBER 1 AND 2

ALLENTOWN, Sept. 30.—The place of the small liberal arts college in American education will be emphasized at academic programs here the week-end of October 1 and 2 when Dr. Levering Tyson is inaugurated as president of Muhlenberg College, succeeding the late Dr. John A. W. Haas.

Dr. Frederick P. Keppel, president of the Carnegie Corporation, and Dr. E. P. Pfattheicher, president of the Lutheran ministerium of Pennsylvania, will be the speakers at the inaugural program in the college chapel Saturday at 10 a. m. when Dr. Tyson will outline the program of his administration.

At the symposium Friday night leaders of nine professions will point to those things their respective callings expect of the small liberal arts colleges.

The speakers will include Dr. John Ward Studebaker, United States Commissioner of Education; Dr. Meta Glass, president of Sweet Briar college and sister of Carter Glass; Dr. F. H. Knobel, president of the United Lutheran Church in America; H. V. Kaltenborn, famed editor and radio newsmen; Dr. George P. Muller, professor of surgery at Jefferson Medical College; Dr. C. C. Williams, president of Lehigh University; Dr. Luther A. Harr, state secretary of banking and former University of Pennsylvania professor; Judge James F. Henninger

Muhlenberg President

DR. LEVERING TYSON

Who on October 1st will be inaugurated as president of Muhlenberg College, succeeding the late Dr. John A. W. Haas.

and Congressman Oliver W. Frey, Allentown.

Representatives of more than 150 colleges and learned societies will be guests of the college. The committee on measurements and guidance of the American Council of Education will meet here with the officers of the council October 2.

Dr. Tyson comes to Muhlenberg from his post as director of the National Advisory Committee on Radio in Education. For almost 20 years he was identified with Columbia university and organized and headed the home study department there. The college he now heads was founded by the Lutheran Ministerium of Pennsylvania in 1867 as a liberal arts educational institution for young men.

SERVING OF TART ICES WITH MEAT GAINS FAVOR

The serving of frozen ices with the meat course is becoming increasingly popular. First started in some of the smart hotels, the vogue quickly was adopted by hostesses who appreciate the importance of appetizing novelties.

Regardless of the season, whether it be Winter or Summer a tart ice will snap up the meat course and lend savor to the entire meal. Use of the mechanical icebox and the many excellent prepared fruit juices on the market simplifies the preparation of this side order.

Aspic jelly long has been a favorite in salads and now the idea has graduated into frozen tomato juice. Flavor the clear, unseasoned tomato juice with a generous amount of lemon or lime, or add a few drops of onion juice. This is ideal with roast beef.

Of course, mint ice long has been a favorite with lamb, even as mint jelly and mint sauce. Now the restaurants have discovered that it pairs equally well with roast or baked ham. Another idea suggested for the baked ham is frozen grape juice, which may be poured into a freezing tray and frozen "as is," unless a few drops of lemon are liked.

Pork, always a substantial and rather rich dish, should be supplemented with a tart ice. Lemon ice will work appetizing wonders with roast pork. Frozen grapefruit juice, combined with some orange juice to avoid over-tartness, is another idea. Stuffed, baked pork chops, served with such an ice, may solve a September dinner problem for the hostess in search of a tempting yet substantial meal. Scalloped potatoes would fit in with this combination.

Lindbergh Through as Aviator?

Col. Lindbergh

Dr. Alexis Carrel

Possibility that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, intrepid globe-girdling aeronaut, will retire from the skies and devote all his attention to medical research is seen in the rumor that he will soon take up residence near the laboratory of his scientific colleague, Dr. Alexis Carrel, on a Breton island. Famed for his air exploits, Lindbergh has attracted attention of the medical fraternity for the mechanical heart which he and Dr. Carrel perfected. A self-imposed exile from the United States, Lindbergh may soon live on a small island off the coast of France.

HELPFUL HINTS

Warehouses Budge With Frozen Foods

The rising trend in demands for frozen vegetables is reflected in the current report of the Bureau of Food Control of the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets.

Frozen peas seem to be heading the popularity list, the supply increasing from 375,768 pounds on August 1, 1936 to 1,070,310 pounds on August 1 of this year.

Other frozen vegetables held in cold storage houses of New York State jumped from 10,692 pounds a year ago to 2,688,586 pounds on August 1.

The bumper 1937 cherry crop is reflected in the amazing increase in cold pack cherries held in storage. The jump was from 10,276,509 pounds on August 1, 1936 to 14,264,606 pounds in one year. However, the first of July saw only 2,078,168 pounds of cold pack cherries held in storage.

Mashed, hashed, French fried, plain boiled or scalloped? The average American consumes about 125 pounds of potatoes a year—unless he (or she) is on a very strict diet.

Use some of that "left-over" preserved ginger to snap up your stewed pears, baked pears, or the fruit that is canned. Stick cinnamon, one or two cloves, lemon juice or rind also will snap up this rather bland fruit.

New Products of Chemical World Helping to Revolutionize Industry

Science Has Aided Business Beat Depression

By CHARLES GRENHAM

International Illustrated News Writer
NEW YORK—The paradox of Japanese armies campaigning in China clothed in the product of New England timber lands is the latest eye-opener traceable to contributions of the research chemist to industry.

Perfection of a process for manufacturing a fabric combining short wood fibers with wool and cotton, in the proportion of 80 per cent wood pulp to 20 per cent wool and cotton, has enabled the Japanese to clothe many of their soldiers in the field warmly and cheaply.

And this is only one phase of the amazing strides made by science in devising economical and efficient substitutes for everyday necessities. It is predicted by Dr. Harry Barnard, Michigan Farm Chemurgic council director, that wearing apparel and household commodities will be produced from farm products almost exclusively in another half century.

Chemistry Aiding Industry

At the present time there are more than 50,000 wood pulp products, including everything from imitation leather and explosives to "silks" and non-stretchable but translucent lampshades. Col. George Richter of the Brown Co. at Berlin, N. H., authority in the field of chemical research in wood products, who himself discovered 500 exclusive ways of turning trees into everyday uses, foresees the day when processed wood pulp will almost entirely replace the lamb and silk-worm.

In another respect, this might be termed the "plastic age" as the flow of plastic articles into commercial channels has been as widespread and irresistible as a rising tide. To the layman a plastic is a substance "something like celluloid," but to manufacturers it represents an invaluable material which is now being converted into 300,000 distinctly different items.

The beginning of "the plastic age" dates back 65 years ago when John W. Hyatt, country editor of Starley, N. Y., accidentally discovered the formula for celluloid, the first commercially useful plastic, while trying to make synthetic ivory from the highly explosive gun cotton. Forty years later another discovery, also accidental, was made by Dr. Leo Backeland, Belgium scientist, who found out the formula for making a non-inflammable material for a cast phenolic resin.

Catalin Is Newest Plastic

A third development in the plastic field came during the World war when European chemists, trying to create synthetic rubber, discovered catalin, a substance made from two poisons, phenol and formaldehyde. This new plastic has the advantage of being producible in any color and is molded into its finished form from the liquid state at a pressure of 25,000 pounds to the square inch.

In some respects Germany has advanced even further than the United States along the lines of industrial chemistry. Synthetic rubber and various metal alloys have been discovered which greatly reduce the Nazi state's dependency on foreign sources of raw material. Each day in new ways chemists throughout the world are helping to create new industries and exploit the more abundant natural resources, working toward the time when man may be clothed entirely in wood, live in houses built and furnished with catalin and new alloys, and subsist on concentrated foods derived from sources which would cause the neighborhood grocer to scoff today!

RECIPES

You Will Want to Try!

Hot Breads For These Cool Days

Brisk Fall days not only better appetites, but they stimulate energy and encourage experiments with new recipes. There is nothing like home-made hot bread on a cool night.

These "Butter Horns," which come from the recipe book of an experienced cook will dress up an ordinary family dinner, or a company luncheon with equal distinction. And they have the added recommendation of being easy to make.

In Court Fight

Mrs. Irene Castle McLaughlin, former toast of Broadway, is shown as she appeared in a Chicago court where she is seeking a divorce from her rich businessman husband, Frederick McLaughlin, on charges of cruelty.

Nellie's Butter Horns

One cup hot water; two-thirds cup sugar; one-half cup shortening; one teaspoon salt. Mix thoroughly. Then dissolve two fresh yeast cakes in two tablespoons warm water. Add one-half teaspoon sugar and let stand 45 minutes in a warm place. Let the first ingredients cool and combine with dissolved yeast cakes. Then add three well-beaten eggs and five cups flour. Let raise until light.

Divide into six parts. Roll out each part about the size of a pie shell. Then cut into pieces as for pie. Butter each individual section with melted butter. Roll from the big end to the little, so that horns are formed. Bake on lightly greased sheet until golden brown, usually about 25 to 30 minutes.

Graham Bread

Two cups graham flour; two cups wheat flour; two teaspoons soda; one cup sugar; one teaspoon salt; two tablespoons melted butter or other pure shortening; two cups sour milk.

This recipe comes from the same source as the Butter Horns. Mix ingredients thoroughly and pour into greased and floured bread pan. Bake slowly in a moderate oven 50 minutes to one hour. This bread is nourishing to use for the children's lunch at school or home. Sprinkle with plain cream or cottage cheese, or add a few chopped nuts or dates.

Chicken Souffle

This delicious recipe comes from an expert cook:

Two cups rich white sauce; two cups cooked chicken; chopped fine; two egg yolks; one teaspoon finely-chopped parsley; one-eighth teaspoon pepper; one teaspoon salt; few drops onion juice; dash cayenne; one-half teaspoon celery salt; few drops Worcestershire sauce; two egg whites, beaten stiff.

Beat egg yolks and add to white sauce. Add chicken, parsley and seasonings. Fold in stiffly-beaten egg whites. Pour into buttered custard cups. Set in pan of water and bake at 350 degrees F. for 35 minutes. Unmould on platter and garnish. May be served with mushroom sauce.

These individual molds are a good choice for a luncheon, as they facilitate serving for the hostess who is her own maid.

Nellie's Simple Fruit Cake

From the same cook's notebook comes this exceptionally good fruit cake.

One-half cup shortening, creamed with one cup sugar and two beaten eggs; one-half cup buttermilk; one-half cup jam; one-half cup chopped nut meats; one-half cup candied fruit; one and one-half cups flour; one-half teaspoon soda; one-half teaspoon cinnamon; one-half teaspoon cloves; one-half teaspoon allspice; one-half teaspoon salt. All seasonings and soda being combined and sifted with flour.

Bake slowly in a loaf pan in a moderate oven for at least one hour. The top may be garnished with candied cherries, or with almonds.

Beet Greens Soup

One pound greens; one cup sour cream; one teaspoon sugar; one raw egg; one teaspoon lemon juice; one-half teaspoon salt; butter; dash of pepper.

Chop greens fine. Put into kettle with five cups hot water. Cook briskly 20 minutes. Skim. Add lemon, salt, and sugar. Cook five minutes. Remove from the fire and cool slightly. Beat egg in bowl and when light, add soup slowly. (Chopped crisp bacon or one tablespoon butter may be added at the last moment.) Chill and serve with a few tablespoons of sour cream in each cup. Sliced hard-boiled eggs may be added for garnish. Any greens.

Celery Chowder

Two pints finely-chopped celery; one small minced onion; two tablespoons butter; three cups milk; one tablespoon flour; two egg yolks; salt and pepper; one cup sliced carrots, mashed.

Put the cooked celery through a sieve, saving the water for the soup. Sauté the minced onion and the cooked carrots in the butter until delicately brown. Add the hot milk and thicken with the flour, mixed with a little cold milk or water. Combine the vegetable and milk mixture and cook together until well-blended. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Just before serving add the beaten egg yolks. Serve with strips of toasted bread.

Lima Bean and Celery Salad

Mix two cups of drained canned, or freshly-cooked lima beans with two cups of sliced celery; six chopped olives; one minced onion; two tablespoons chopped green pepper or pimiento. Moisten with mayonnaise and arrange on lettuce or watercress. Garnish with curled celery and sprinkle with paprika. Serves six. Serve with toasted crackers and cream cheese.

ATTERSON PINNED TO MAT BY BILL SLEDGE

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 30.—Jake Patterson, of Syracuse, won the feature bout at the Arena last night when he pinned Bill Sledge, of Texas, for the deciding fall in the resumption of a grudge match that ended last week in a draw.

Sledge brought a dropkick into play in winning the first fall after 22 minutes. Bill had the burly Patterson at his mercy throughout the better part of the elapsed time, as he applied an armlock with telling effect. Patterson, meanwhile, resorted to hair-pulling tactics in an effort to bring about the Texan's downfall.

Patterson gained the second fall by knocking Sledge to the canvas with a potent forearm. The blow flattened Bill on the mat, whereupon Jake pounced on his adversary to gain the fall after 13 minutes had elapsed.

The third fall, which Patterson won, was anything but pleasing to the fans, the majority of whom were pulling for the Texan. Patterson knocked the referee from the ring, and while the latter was attempting to clamber into the squared circle Jake was on the canvas. However, Patterson managed to roll over and pin Sledge's shoulders to the canvas just when the referee reentered the ring. Patterson was awarded the fall, much to the disgust of numerous ringersiders.

The second bout, a merry tussle between Bobby Roberts and Sammy Menacher, ended in a draw after 30 minutes had elapsed. The contestants staged one of the best bouts seen here in some time. The semi-windup went to Abe Coleman, sawed-off Hebrew wrestler. He flattened Leo Hyatt to the canvas with his famous drop-kick. George Kondylas won the opener from Stanley Wyckoff after 16 minutes had expired.

BOYS LIKE COOKING

WESTFIELD, Mass. (INS)—Women may hate cooking, but boys like it. Evidence of this fact was given at the Westfield high school with the announcement the senior boys' cooking class had increased ten times in a single year. Last year there were only two boys in the class, but the first semester this year finds 21 boys learning the art of cooking.

WALSH GIVES VIEWS ON PENNANT CONTENDERS

(Note: This is the second of a series of articles by Davis J. Walsh, dealing with the two New York clubs, the Yankees and Giants, who now seemed assured of meeting in the 1937 World Series, starting next Wednesday.)

By Davis J. Walsh (I. N. S. Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(INS)—Still sticking narrow-mindedly with the impression that whoever wins the 1937 World Series will do it much better with what they may be expected to have next week, rather than on what they had last month (August), I'm setting out today to play the Yankees against the Giants on the "hot" and "cold" basis. In other words, an August average can be an October foperoo.

I've always said, in fact, that last month doesn't count next week, if you get what I'm driving at, and even if you don't let's just skip it and go on with the idea that a bad "hot" team can and often does beat a good "cold" team in a short series. The Giants are hotter than a stove hinge right now. Of course, the thing doesn't always work out. The Cubs were hot in September two years ago, but they turned cold in the ensuing World Series. Not however because the idea was all wrong. The Cubs had a monopoly on that.

This time, the heat is strictly on at the Polo Grounds. Joe Moore, for instance, has just finished hitting safely in 20 consecutive games; McCarthy has hit .380 for his last 17 games; Melton has been the winning pitcher in three of the last six games won by the club; Rippe has hit safely in his last 13 games. Moreover, the Giants themselves have just won six straight when the pinch was on.

In fact, the current Cubs have won nine of their last twelve and still have slipped one game further behind the pace. Most of the Yankees, on the other hand, seem to be cooling out—not too much, but appreciably, and for noticeable exceptions to this statement, I'll have to commend you to Gomez, Myril Hoag, Bill Dickey and, with not many reservations, the DiMaggio.

However, the following tables, showing respective performances of early August compared with late September, may be worth looking at:

Hitters: Yankees—Gehrig, off more than 30 points; DiMaggio, off more than 20 points, but still the guy who keeps the club rolling; Selkirk, off approximately 25 points; Henrich, off 8 points; Dickey, up 15 points; Rolfe, about even; Powell, off 17 points; Hoak, up approximately 35 points; Crosetti, off 15 points; Lazzeri, about even, but away down below .250, at that.

Giants—Bartell, about even; Whitehead, up 17 points; McCarthy, up 28 points; Moore, off 7 points; Rippe, up 5 points; Leslie, off 22 points; Danning, up 56 points; Ott, up 35 points; Mancuso, about even; Berger, about even; Leiber (unavailable until recent weeks), hitting .277, but with a lot of drive.

Pitchers: Yankees—Gomez, won eight of his last nine; Pearson, won two of his last five; Murphy, won one of his last three; Ruffing, won four, lost four; Malone won none, lost two; Hadley, won five of last seven; Andrews, won three of last four.

Giants—Schumacher, won four of last five; Melton, won seven of last ten; Gumbert, won six of last eight; Hubbell, won five of last seven; Coffman, won five of last six; Castleman, won one, lost one; Smith, won one, lost one.

"Hot" clubs that seem worth referring to in this connection are the White Sox (1930); the Braves (1914); the 1921 Giants, after being 7½ games in second place on September 19; the 1928 Yankees (when it looked like the old boys were licked in early September); the 1931 Cardinals (when Pepper Martin ran amuck); the Giants (1933); and the 1934 Cardinals (they came from 7 games back on September 1).

Of course, I can't say that the DiMaggio was entirely frigid yesterday with his double, triple and forty-fifth home run in the opening game yesterday, nor was Ruffing with his two-hitter. Nor, for that matter, Pearson, with his 2-1 defeat in the second game. So—what?

So, frankly, at this stage of the game, I'm not answering questions. I'm asking them.

Japan Virtually Rejects American Bombing Protest

The United States and other governments, Japan asserted flatly today in a formal reply to the note recently dispatched to Tokyo by American Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

The American note protested against bombing of open Chinese towns and the killing of non-combatants as "contrary to humanity." Japan retorted that aerial attacks against Nanking are "unavoidable."

The Japanese note was handed to United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew and to the French envoy. A similar memorandum was delivered verbally to British Ambassador Sir Robert Craigie.

The Japanese reply, which amounted to a virtual rejection of the protest dispatch by Hull, was briefly worded and almost curt in tone. Refusal of Japan to change her course in China was its principal theme.

This answer was expected in diplomatic circles because of the fact the American and other notes to Tokyo had utterly failed to induce Japan to halt her bombings of open towns in China. The day after Hull's note was dispatched Japan rained death and destruction on Canton, killing and wounding thousands of Chinese civilians.

The note also rejected the American claim holding Japan responsible for American property damages resulting from Japanese raids.

Speaking of Tough Assignments

By BURNLEY

Shed a few salty tears for Nebraska's new grid mentor, good old Biff Jones. His team's first game of the season will be held this Saturday, and the opening foe is none other than "little" Minnesota.

The always powerful Gophers, terror of the Midwest in past seasons, may be headed for another national title. Over the past three years Minnesota has the most impressive record of any grid team, and in spite of Bernie Bierman's pessimistic forecast, the Thundering Herd is due to trample over many a foe in 1937.

The Cornhuskers from Nebraska have given the Vikings more trouble than perhaps any other team in recent seasons. Last year's game would have gone into the books as a tie but for Andy Gram's amazing 75-yard touchdown run in the last 68 seconds of play.

Biff Jones has inherited an experienced, formidable squad from Bible's reign. In center Charlie Brock, ballcarrier Johnny Howell and the veteran wingman, Elmer Dohrmann, the Huskers have three potential all-Americans.

The battle-scarred Dohrmann, apparently fully recovered from the injuries that hampered him in '36, will be making his final bid for national honors. Towering six feet six inches above the terrain, he's a pass-snatching demon.
